Erectile disorder can happen:

1. When the flow of blood is not proper towards the male organ the nerves get harmed
2. Due to stress or emotional reasons
3. It can be caused as an early warning sign of a more serious illness. These might include atherosclerosis (hardening or blocked arteries), heart disease, high blood pressure or high blood sugar from Diabetes.
4. It is essential to find the cause of the problem. This will help to handle the problem and handle the overall well-being. If something is good for your heart health and even sensual health.

Generation of an erection

During the sensual arousal, the nerves release the chemicals that increase the flow of blood to the male organ. The blood flows to the two erection chambers in the male organ. The chambers are made up of spongy muscle tissue (the corpus cavernosum). When the erection takes place the spongy tissues relax and trap blood. The pressure of blood makes the male organ firm and stiff and causes men an erection. When the man ejaculates then there is another set of nerves that reach the male organ and cause the muscular tissues in the male organ to contract. This is when the erection comes down. When a man is not sensually aroused then the male organ becomes soft and limp.
