Erectile disorder can take place due to:

- When the supply of blood to the male organ is not proper
- Nerves that carry signals to the male organ are injured or harmed
- Stress or other emotional factors.

Erectile disorder can be an early warning sign of various illnesses. These might be atherosclerosis (hardening or blocked arteries), heart disease, high blood pressure or high blood sugar from Diabetes. It is essential to find the cause of your problem and to assist the overall well-being of the person. It is essential to know that if something is good for your heart it will be good for your sensual health.

Working of an erection

When a man is sensually aroused the flow of blood rises to the male organ. This blood flows to the erection chambers in the male organ. These chambers are made up of spongy muscle tissue (the corpus cavernosum). These chambers are not hollow. When the erection takes place the blood gets trapped inside the male organ. The pressure of blood in the male organ makes the male organ firm which results in an erection.

When a man releases orgasm then the nerve signals make the muscular tissues in the male organ contract. The blood flows back to the male organ. When the male organ of the man is not sensually aroused then it is soft and limp form.
