1.Product Knowledge: Resellers need in-depth knowledge of Oracle Primavera's suite of project management software, including Primavera P6, Primavera Unifier, and Primavera Cloud. This includes understanding features, benefits, and use cases for different industries.

1.Sales Collateral: Resellers require sales collateral such as brochures, datasheets, and product guides that highlight key features, case studies, and customer testimonials. These materials help in explaining the value proposition of Oracle Primavera solutions to potential clients.

1. Training and Certification: Resellers need access to training programs and certification courses provided by Oracle to ensure their sales teams have the necessary expertise to effectively sell Primavera solutions.

2. Marketing Support: Marketing support from Oracle in the form of co-branded materials, digital marketing assets, and campaigns can help resellers generate leads and create awareness about Primavera solutions in their target markets.

1. Partner Programs: Oracle likely offers partner programs for resellers that provide incentives, discounts, and support to help them grow their Primavera business. These programs may include deal registration, marketing development funds (MDF), and sales enablement resources.

1. Technical Support: Access to technical support resources is crucial for resellers to address any issues or queries from their clients regarding Primavera software implementation, customization, and integration.

1. Vertical-specific Solutions: Resellers may also benefit from vertical-specific solutions and expertise tailored to industries such as construction, oil and gas, utilities, and public sector, which have unique project management requirements.

1.Competitive Analysis: Market content should include competitive analysis reports to help resellers understand the strengths and weaknesses of competing project management solutions and position Oracle Primavera effectively against them.
